

INDIANA STATE FAIR CONCERTS

PAYDAYS & PERKS

Performers made some unusual requests

DAVID LINDQUIST DAVID.LINDQUIST@INDYSTAR.COM

Stand-up comedian Gabriel Iglesias ranks as the highest-paid concert performer at this year's Indiana State Fair, according to public documents. • The fair paid $135,000 for an Iglesias performance on Aug. 13 at the Indiana Farmers Coliseum. Iglesias, also known as "Fluffy," attracted an audience of 3,871, the biggest crowd among four concerts presented at the 8,200-capacity venue. • Because ailing pop star Meghan Trainor canceled her Coliseum performance, the Indiana State Fair Commission didn't release documents related to what Trainor's guaranteed payment might have been. • Most concert contracts are private, but ones negotiated by the fair commission, an entity of state government, are public record.

» See CONCERTS, Page 5A

CONTRACT DEMANDS
Music performers make special requests, and those performing at the Indiana State Fair were no different.

- » KC & the Sunshine Band: Two 8-ounce individual servings of plain yogurt.
- » Indigo Girls: Current copy of The New York Times.
- » Village People: No "shock-jock" radio shows.
- » Morris Day & the Time: Payment in cash.
- » Creedence Clearwater Revisited: No John Fogerty mentions.

Performer	Pay
Gabriel Iglesias	$135,000
Jake Owen	$125,000
Garrison Keillor	$80,000
KC & the Sunshine Band	$50,000